Amid Federal Shutdown, This Nonprofit is Offering Free Internet for SNAP Recipients Nationwide

HOBOKEN, NJ – As the government shutdown threatens to suspend SNAP (food stamp) benefits on November 1, Computers 4 People, a national nonprofit dedicated to closing the digital divide, is launching an emergency relief campaign through its internet service brand, Shield Internet.

Starting today, SNAP recipients across the United States can get at least one month of free 5G internet by visiting www.computers4people.org/shield, entering the coupon code SNAP, and uploading a photo of their SNAP card.

Over 40 million Americans rely on SNAP benefits each month, nearly the same number of people who still lack access to reliable home internet. For millions of families, that means facing a devastating choice between paying for groceries or staying connected to critical news, healthcare, school, and work.

Founded in 2019 by Dylan Zajac at just 15 years old, Computers 4 People began with a simple mission: to make sure everyone has the opportunity to pursue their dreams, regardless of income or access to technology. What started as one teenager refurbishing computers in his bedroom has now grown into a national movement to ensure no one is left offline.

“From conversations with our hundreds of partners, we know internet access isn’t optional anymore,” said Barbara Pinto, Head of Partnerships at Computers 4 People. “When people can’t reach their healthcare portals, bank accounts, or job applications, they’re shut out of daily life.”

The initiative is powered by Mission Telecom, a nonprofit telecommunications provider ensuring high-speed 5G coverage nationwide.
